LOW DEATH RATE AMONG VETERANS

Two Veterans Die in Gettysburg. Death Rate so Low that it was Felt Figures were being Suppressed. Mistaken Idea.

Up to the present time there have been but seven deaths of veterans here to attend the celebration, despite numerous rumors of many more. Two old soldiers died on Tuesday afternoon and another this morning.

So remarkable is this low record of mortality among a body of 40,000 or 50,000 men, practically all of whom are over 70 years of age, that it was felt for a day or two that the authorities were keeping from the public the actual condition of affairs. Such is not the case, however, and the deaths are given out for publication as soon as they occur.

Allan D. Albert, of Washington, D. C., was the first of the veterans to die in Gettysburg. His death occurred at 1:30 Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Faber on Chambersburg street where he had secured accommodations for the week. Monday night he suffered a stroke of paralysis after he retired. His family was notified and a son came here, but was unable to reach town before Tuesday evening. The body was taken to Washington this morning. Mr. Albert had been subject to heart trouble. For the past twenty-seven years he was a pension examiner and he was also secretary of the 45th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers' Association. He was 75 years old.

Landes L. Travis, a veteran, was entering the Hotel Gettysburg about eight o'clock this morning when he reeled and fell dead on the concrete pavement. He was carried into the hotel and an ambulance summoned, but the physicians pronounced the man dead when they reached the place. Mr. Travis was a resident of Westmore, Pa., and a member of Cunningham Post 97. He was 68 years of age.

Christopher Yates, of Latrobe, Pa., died late Tuesday afternoon in camp as a result of the extreme heat. He was 70 years of age. The body has been sent to his home.

The general health of the veterans is considered remarkably good. In the various hospitals hundreds have been treated but ninety per cent. of the cases are from exhaustion or heat prostration, none of them being serious. The use of liquor is said to be a contributing cause in a large number of the heat prostrations.

Senator Smoot was one of the patients at a state dispensary this morning. He was complaining of ear trouble.

TOOK OFF HIS ARM

Met Man who Deprived him of an Arm.

Augustus J. Washburne, of Philadelphia, had the unusual experience of meeting the "Reb" who cut his arm off at Gettysburg 50 years ago. Washburne remembered the face of the man with whom he had had the hand-to-hand struggle at the High Water Mark. He went to the scene and looked all around for the spot. There stood the very man who had slashed him with the bayonet. Marching over to him, Washburne asked him if he remembered the incident, and the man looked at him a long time and then said, "By gosh, you are the fellow!" The "reb" was James Burnett, of Indianapolis, who was in one of the Indiana Confederate regiments. He and Washburne immediately became friends, and before a half-hour had elapsed they were calling one another Jim and Gus.

TO CLOSE EARLY

Gettysburg Bars will Close Each Night at 11:30.

At the request of Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, State Commissioner of Health, Judge Swope to-day asked all the licensed liquor dealers of Gettysburg to close their bars at 11:30 each night and not to re-open until the following morning. The dealers will comply, it is stated. The action follows the large number of cases in the hospitals due to the use of liquor by the veterans.

VICE PRESIDENT HERE THURSDAY

Vice President Marshall and Party of Congressmen and Senators will Visit the Big Camp on Thursday Afternoon. Other Visitors.

Arrangements for the trip of the Congressional delegation to the Gettysburg battlefield celebration were completed Tuesday night by Sergeant at-Arms Gordon, of the House.

A special train of four cars will leave Washington at 8 A. M. Thursday morning. Speaker Clark, 21 Representatives, Postmaster Dunbar and Chaplain Couden and his page, of the House, will travel in three cars, and Vice-President Marshall and eight Senators will be in a fourth car.

The Congressional party will be met at the station by automobiles and driven about town before going to the battlefield.

The party will leave Gettysburg late Thursday night and reach Washington early Friday morning.

Governor Goldsborough, of Maryland; Adjutant-General Macklin, General William D. Gill and Colonel W. Bladen Lowndes arrived in camp late Tuesday evening. They motored up from Baltimore in General Gill's automobile. They went immediately to the guest camp, on the Gettysburg College campus.

Governor Sulzer and party from Albany, arrived at the college this morning as did also Governor Fielder, of New Jersey.

Members of the families of a number of the distinguished generals of the battle are registered either at college or seminary and Mrs. Longstreet is spending some time in the big camp.

MISSED HIS SHOT

Colonel Schoonmaker Meets Man Who Tried to Kill Him.

When Colonel J. H. Schoonmaker was walking through the camp he was accosted by Orlando Douglass, a Confederate veteran from North Carolina. Douglass said the Colonel probably did not remember him, but he remembered the Colonel, because he had taken a close shot at him on the field at Gettysburg and had missed. Later on, Douglass was captured by the Federals, and was taken to a Northern prison by a detachment under the Colonel's command. Then he recognized the man he had shot at, but said nothing.

Later, Douglass thought he ought to have told the man about it, and tried to learn his name. He was unable to do so, and he went on for many years thinking about it, regretting that he had not seized the opportunity.

It was not until this week that the Colonel learned of the particular attempt on his life, and it was when the man who had made the attempt told him. The Colonel laughed, and insisted upon hearing the whole story told over again.

ODD COINCIDENCE

Two Men with Same Name from Duplicate Towns.

One of the most remarkable coincidences of the camp was the meeting of two men with exactly the same name, but, in different states, one of whom fought on the Union side in the Battle of Gettysburg, and the other with the Confederates. These two men are John Carson, of Burlington, N. J., and John Carson, of Burlington, N. C. How they came to meet was by the merest chance. The Jersey Carson was walking along one of the streets, and saw a man in gray. Just to be friendly, the Jerseyman stopped him and gave him a greeting. It was not until they had talked for several minutes that they discovered that their names were identical, as well as the names of their towns. They were so tickled with the coincidences that they walked a mile in the broiling sun to the press tents to tell about it.

EXERCISES IN THE GREAT TENT

Governor Tener, Secretary Garrison and Others Welcome the Blue and Gray to Gettysburg. Addresses at First Meeting.

The first of the general exercises in the big tent occurred Tuesday afternoon when there were addresses by Governor Tener, Secretary of War Garrison, and the commanders-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans.

Among the 200 guests on the platform were Governors Mann, Virginia; McCreary, Kentucky, and Eberhardt, Minnesota; Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, and the following Confederate generals: Robertson, Texas; West, Georgia; Thomas J. Shaffer, Louisiana; A. D. Williams, Florida; E. M. Law, Florida, and Carr, North Carolina.

The invocation was delivered by Rev. George Edwards Lovejoy, chaplain-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. The benediction was to have been delivered by Rev. H. M. Hamill, chaplain-general of the Confederate Veterans, who did not show up.

Col. J. M. Schoonmaker, chairman of the Pennsylvania Battle Anniversary Celebration Commission, presided.

Governor Tener, in his speech to the veterans, said in part:

"As Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and speaking for her people, I extend a welcome to the soldiers and sailors, both the Blue and the Gray survivors of the great hosts of brave men who 50 years ago wrote upon the pages of the world's martial history the enduring fame and glory of the American soldier."

"We are today on the greatest battlefield of the Civil War and of the world, not to commemorate a victory, but rather to emphasize the spirit of national brotherhood and national unity, which in the years since the close of that war has enabled this republic to move forward and upward until today she leads the nations of the earth in all that makes for the advancement and uplift of the human race."

"We meet on this occasion to participate in a ceremony that stands unmatched in all recorded time; for nowhere in history have men who opposed each other in mighty battle thus come together in peaceful reunion 50 years thereafter—all content with the result of the struggle and grateful that in defeat or victory there was left no stain upon American manhood, and no question as to the bravery or devotion to duty of the American soldier."

"Today soldiers of both armies gather as American citizens, the Union soldiers, in some instances journeying from Southern States, and Confederate soldiers in some instances from Northern States."

"The heart of the whole people of Pennsylvania goes out to you as honored guests of the nation and state. Our sincerest desire is for your greatest enjoyment while here, and our fondest wish is that when you return to your homes you may recall in most pleasant memory the scenes and incidents of this day and time."

Confederate Pensions.
General Bennett H. Young, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, in his address Tuesday discussed the question of government pensions for the soldiers still alive who fought under the Stars and Bars.

"It may be," he said, "that the suggestion lately put into form to give Confederate soldiers the same privileges in national soldiers' homes as federal soldiers may lead to the establishing of this right; or that peace in its demand for the obliteration of all the bitterness of the past may demand that the nation shall pension surviving Confederates."

"For nearly fifty years the people of the South without complaint have contributed millions for the pensions of federal soldiers. A nation's gratitude has been meted out through enormous grants to provide for the federal soldiers, their wives and children. No murmur has ever come from the men of the Confederacy at this vast outlay, and there are some who predict that the hour may arrive in national life when the few and infirm remaining men who fought under the Confederate standards with admittedly unsurpassed courage should have in the evening time the comforts and conveniences that their intrepidity deserves."

Secretary Garrison.
The veterans were also welcomed to the reunion by Lindley M. Garrison, Secretary of War. Mr. Garrison said, in part:

"In the name of the Nation I bid you welcome. In the name of the whole people of a united country I bid you twice welcome. In the name of its people who recognize the high

CROOKS QUICKLY SENT FROM TOWN

Large Force of Detectives Active and Burglars are Escorted to Train by State Police. Six Others are Deported.

Under the energetic direction of Major John C. Groome and a force of expert detectives, Gettysburg and its thousands of visitors have been successfully protected this week and not one complaint of depredations by pickpockets has been registered. J. H. Seville, of the Philadelphia Pinkerton force, is head of the large corps of detectives which have been brought here from many of the principal cities of the country.

Two house burglars were found in town on Tuesday and taken in hand by Detectives Hugh McCaffery, of Chicago; Albert Swinehart, of Pittsburgh; and Charles Faye, of New York. They were identified by Detective Charles S. White, of York, as Harry Mann and Samuel Daniels, alias Beaver, both of whom have served penitentiary time for robbing jewelry stores. They were escorted to the train by state police, who saw that they left town.

Six crooks were found on Tuesday using the taking of subscriptions for a magazine as a blind. They work in large crowds and short-change their customers. Frequently former well known crooks will take up this business and say that they are in a legitimate occupation. Being spotted as this class of individual the entire outfit was sent out of town on Tuesday afternoon.

There have been fifteen arrests on minor charges about town. Three fakirs were caught operating without license. They were taken before a justice and ordered to pay the license of $25 each and costs amounting to $6 each.

CASHTOWN

Robert Pomroy and wife and William Pomroy, of Shelby, Iowa; Elizabeth Pomroy, of Concord, are visiting at the home of their sister, Mrs. James Diehl, of this place.

Dr. Ervin Diehl and wife, of Trenton, N. J., are spending several days with his parents in this place.

The people of our town are well pleased with the oiling of the streets. On last Sunday 112 autos passed through this place.

"BOYS IN BLUE"

Two Veterans Each Claiming to be Over 100 Years of Age.

Macagan Ware, of Beaver Brook, N. J., a veteran of the Civil War and claiming to be 112 scant years old, is in Gettysburg. Mr. Ware, despite his years, is active and vivacious and is not sensitive about his age. He is, as a matter of fact, 111 years, 9 months and some days old, but for the sake of convenience he just calls himself 112 and lets it go at that.

Mr. Ware was something like 61 years old when he enlisted. Perhaps he had to fool the enlisting officers somewhat, but he was in the war just the same, fighting with the North. He is accompanied by his wife, who is said to be something like 75 years young, and she is just as anxious as he to see where the big fight took place half a century ago, when she was a young woman of twenty-five. Mr. Ware is patriarchal in appearance, with long white hair and commanding presence.

Bennett Britten, of Winfield Scott Post 73, Plainfield, N. J., who was 100 years old the early part of June, is another veteran of many years who is surprising all who see him by his activity.

OUT OF WINDOW

Veteran Not to Miss the Time of His Life.

Fearing that his son, Charles B. Hawley, a director of the Northumberland Trust & Safe Deposit Company, would keep him from coming to Gettysburg to attend the fiftieth anniversary celebration, feeble John Hawley, 85 years old, a veteran of the Civil War, climbed out of a window and took the first train for the camp grounds.

REQUIEM HIGH MASS

Will Celebrate Mass for Members of the Irish Brigade.

Requiem high mass for the repose of the souls of the deceased members of the Irish Brigade will be held in St. Francis Xavier's church Friday morning at seven o'clock. Rev. Fr. Boyle, pastor.

SOME HAVE LEFT, OTHERS ARE HERE

Several Trainloads of Weary Veterans Start for their Homes but Others Come in and Many Visitors begin to Arrive.

Hot and tired after roaming about the battlefield for two days, hundreds of veterans left for their homes this morning in special trains run by the railroads in response to requests from those who have gotten enough of reunion and celebration. At the same time, in-coming trains brought many more old soldiers and the first large stream of visitors to the town started to arrive.

The extreme heat of Tuesday afternoon resulted in many prostrations and extreme exhaustion to scores of the men who came for the anniversary, and they realized that, for their own personal safety, it was necessary that they start for their homes. No complaint was found with arrangements at the camp, all being well satisfied with everything there, including tent furnishings and the food, but the weather conditions made further stay too burdensome.

The outgoing veterans in many instances started to take with them the blankets, issued by the War Department for their comfort while here, and the officers at the camp had a big proposition on their hands to prevent the loss of many of these blankets. There are in the camp 80,000 blankets which were purchased at a cost of $2.48 each, or a total of about $200,000. Uncle Sam is not quite generous enough to make a present of this amount of goods to his old soldiers and an effort is now being made to let veterans know generally that they will not be allowed to keep the blankets as souvenirs.

A shortage in this article of comfort was noticed on Tuesday and the reason was not discovered until a search of some of the tents was made. One old soldier was sleeping on three, was using three more for covering and had nine under his cot. He explained that he was saving them for friends, but the officers decided they were in a better position to care for the friends and confiscated the blankets. Others are said to have gotten more than their two, but things were finally straightened out.

The greatest number in camp at one time is said to have been between 50,000 and 55,000 on Tuesday. It was necessary to pitch additional tents to accommodate all, some refusing to go into the tents located in sections other than those occupied by their own states and sleeping in the assembly tent instead.

VETERAN HAS FALL

Dropped 15 Feet to Creek Bank. Escapes with Slight Injuries.

John A. Martin, aged 79 years, a veteran of the Civil War, residing in York, stepped off a train which was standing on the P. R. R. bridge and fell through the structure to the creek bank, about fifteen feet below, and is in the hospital with a bruised hip, a cut hand and other slight injuries.

Mr. Martin was returning from Gettysburg, and when the train reached the bridge it stopped for orders. Martin, it is said, went to the platform and opened the trap door and stepped out into the darkness, supposing the train was at the station. He landed on the timbers of the bridge and then fell through and struck the creek bank.

WAS ROBBED

Veteran from North Carolina Loses Money and Ticket.

Robbed of $50, all the money he brought with him, and unable to walk over the battlefield because he lost his left leg at Winchester, Major John H. Kerr gave up in disgust and disappointment and started back to his home in Yanesville, N. C. He came to camp with the train of Confederates from North Carolina. His pocketbook, cash and return railroad ticket were gone when he awoke in his tent. Arrangements were made for another ticket.

TO SIFT MULHALL LOBBY CHARGES

The Official Inquiry to Begin on July 8.

CONGRESS MAY TAKE ACTION

Mulhall and Prominent Men He Implicated in Sensational Statement to Be Subpoenaed.

Washington, July 1.—"This has become a matter of national importance. The charges will be probed thoroughly. We intend to sift them to the bottom."

So declared Senator Overman, chairman of the senate lobby committee, after conferring with a majority of his associates on the committee concerning the charges made by Colonel Martin M. Mulhall, long field agent and lobbyist of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Senator Overman announced that the committee would meet on July 8 to proceed with the lobby investigation, including the Mulhall charges which have caused a tremendous sensation in Washington.

Senators and members of the house are demanding to be heard in answer to the charges. A movement is on foot for an investigation by the house as well as the senate, and when the house meets a resolution for an investigation by the house may be introduced. Congressman Sherley, of Kentucky, may present it. It is possible that as the outgrowth of the ultra sensational charges made by Mulhall a double-headed investigation will soon be in progress.

The Mulhall charges, alleging, as they do, that the National Association of Manufacturers, with its enormous wealth, has for years, through an active and insidious lobby at Washington, carried on a campaign to promote legislation hostile to labor, to kill off legislation desired by labor in favor of a tariff commission, against men in congress and public life who did not serve its ends, and for men in congress and official circles who were subservient, has thrown all other phases of the lobby inquiry into an eclipse.

In many quarters it is predicted that these revelations will prove the most important which have occurred in American political and industrial life since the disclosure of the Standard Oil letters by William Randolph Hearst. Not only do the letters, papers and memoranda which Mulhall has disclosed purport to reach into the legislative and political affairs, but also to go deep into many phases of the war of capital and labor in this country.

In any event, the committee is breaking ground for an exhaustive investigation of the Mulhall allegations. Mulhall, at his own request, has already been subpoenaed. James A. Emery, counsel and alleged lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers, and former Congressman James E. Watson, of Indiana, will be called. President John Kirby, Jr., of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be a witness.

Not only will these men be required to testify, but Senator Overman declares that the policy of the committee will be "to let no guilty man escape."

Every member of senate or house who has been mentioned by Mulhall in his revelation will be given the chance to appear before the committee and every other individual who is directly involved in any important way will be subpoenaed. It will be a case of putting out a dragnet for witnesses.

FIGHTING IN THE BALKANS

Bulgarians Attack Servians in Disputed Macedonian Territory.

Belgrade, Serbia, July 1.—The Bulgarians opened an attack on the Servian troops along the whole line in Macedonia, according to dispatches from the Servian headquarters.

The Bulgarian troops opened their attack on the Servian advanced posts before Istip, and a couple of hours later their artillery was brought into action. The Bulgarian attack gradually spread until there was fighting at Retna, Boukva, Zletovo, Neogasi and Valandovo. The Bulgarians appeared intent upon seizing the railroad.

The publication of the news has created immense excitement in the Servian capital.

ARREST FOLLOWS THE INQUEST

Harold Smith Held in Connection With Girl's Death.

IS HELD IN $5000 BAIL

Gas Company Manager Is Held as an Accessory Before and After the Criminal Operation.

Salisbury, Md., July 1.—Harold Smith, general manager of the Home Gas company of this place, was held by the coroner's jury as an accessory before and after the fact to the illegal operation that resulted in the death of Florence Wainwright.

Smith, who is about forty years old, married and prominent in business in Salisbury, was arrested and placed in the Wicomico county jail, pending release in $5000 bail.

Florence Wainwright, twenty-four years old, was bookkeeper of the gas company. Her body was found in the office of the gas company on Friday night, June 29. A medical examination showed that death had been caused by an illegal operation performed a few hours before.

Smith was arrested by Roy E. Smith, the sheriff, in the gas office and he was arraigned before Squire Covington, also the acting coroner of Salisbury. The accused man sent for Colonel Marion Humphreys, managing director of the gas company, to enter bail for him.

Smith declared that he was innocent of the charge and that everything would come out all right.

Public opinion seems to have died down considerably with the arrest. Many of the residents of Salisbury who followed Smith up Main street from the gas office and to prison said they were satisfied now that justice would be done.

Mrs. Smith, wife of the accused man, was greatly agitated when she learned of her husband's arrest, but declared she believes he could prove his innocence. The evidence against Smith is all circumstantial, but State's Attorney Bell declared the chain was a strong one.

The verdict of the coroner's jury on which the warrant for Smith was based reads substantially as follows, according to William S. Powell, one of the jurors:

"We, the jury, find that Florence Wainwright came to her death in or about the office of the Home Gas company as the result of a criminal operation performed, and hold Harold Smith accessory thereto both before and after the fact."

"I drove them to the tall timber and I am satisfied," said Powell. "I would never have signed the verdict if they had not put Harold Smith's name in it."

Smith's name was freely used in the case since Miss Wainwright died. He lives in Camden avenue, Salisbury, with his wife and two children.

Powell, the juror, explained some side lights of the inquest on Friday night which are startling, if true. According to Powell, the jurors were deliberating when a verdict was sent to them asking them to sign it. It read in substance as follows, according to Powell:

"We, the jury, find that Florence Wainwright came to her death from an operation at the hands of a person or persons unknown to this jury."

Powell said he refused to sign the verdict, and that Ralph Williams, another juror, also declined to be bound to the verdict. The state's attorney said he did not write out any verdict, and no one can be found to say who it was. Powell does not know, he said where the verdict came from.

"I stood alone in the fight," he said "the others being in favor of returning a verdict whitewashing the suspects and hushing up the affair. The inquest was improper from the fact that it was a star chamber affair. We had no sooner started to deliberate than we received what is termed a petition asking us to bring in a blanket verdict covering up the facts of the case. The evidence, however, was clear on certain points, and I refused to yield from my position."

Powell declared that the operation was performed in the gas office between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon of June 29.

Philadelphia, July 1.—After the game was over between the Phillies and New York, in which the Giants won, 10 to 11, in ten innings, there was a fight between Addie Brennan, the Phillies' southpaw twirler, and Manager McGraw, of the New York team. There had been some bad feeling between the two players all during the game. Brennan was on the bench and McGraw occupied the coach's box at third, right opposite.

As the teams were leaving the field and about to enter the clubhouse the hostilities broke loose. McGraw and Mike Doolan were walking side by side to the clubhouse and Brennan was some distance in front. McGraw said, pointing to Brennan: "That's the fellow I'm after and I am going to get him."

Doolan told the Giants' manager he had better not start anything around there as he might get all that was coming to him. McGraw paid no attention, but marched off to get Brennan. Addie was wise to what was coming off and turned as McGraw approached him. McGraw stepped back as if to hit him, and Brennan rushed in with a left hook and knocked the New Yorker out. Then the police and players interfered and separated the men. McGraw had the side of his face badly cut.

HAND IN HAND WITH THE MAKER

In years gone by it used to be that a manufacturer's responsibility for the things he made stopped with the sale of them. But that is no longer so. We are living in an age of progressive and efficient business building.

Manufacturers no longer consider the signing of an order from a reputable retailer as the climax of their interest and effort. And, what is more, the progressive merchants do not feel that they are good business men unless they have agreed upon and put into practice some arrangement whereby both the manufacturer and the retailer unite in the endorsement of the article in question.

By this kind of arrangement retailers offer their patrons two-fold evidence of quality and reliability—a double responsibility that spells safety to the prudent buyer.

And the manufacturer who wants to help his dealers, uses local newspapers to bring customers to the retail counter to ask for his product.

Dealers and manufacturers interested in local advertising for national products are invited to write to the BUREAU OF ADVERTISING, AMERICAN NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS ASSOCIATION, World Building, New York.

A DIPLOMATIC KNOT.

It Wasn't Tied in a Tangle Just For the Fun of the Thing.

Ever since diplomacy was first invented its most eminent practitioners have expended their best efforts in mystifying if not in actually deceiving their rivals. Ueber Land and Meer cities an amusing anecdote of diplomatic life in the eighteenth century.

In 1741 Count Bestushew was sent by the emperor of Russia to Stockholm to put the question of war or peace to the Swedish government. Upon arriving the count made known his mission and then waited patiently for an answer.

Finally when he had almost given up hope of getting a reply he received a long communication from the Swedish minister of war. Eagerly Count Bestushew opened the letter, for he knew that it contained the long expected answer. But to his despair he found it so encumbered with official phrases and formalities that he could make nothing of its meaning. For two hours he struggled in vain to comprehend the confused document. Then he hastened to the minister of war.

"My dear Count Bestushew," said the minister when the count had explained his difficulty. "I have no authority to communicate to you orally the contents of this document. I could not think of it."

"But I have puzzled over this for two hours, and still I can make nothing of it."

"Pray, do not blame yourself, count," said the minister. "You could hardly expect to unravel in two hours a document that took me two days to knit and knot together."

Painfully Mixed.

A very fashionable young man stopped at a florist's one hot summer day to order a box of flowers sent to his lady love. At the same time he also purchased a design for the funeral of a friend. On the card for the box he wrote:

"Hoping this may help you to bear the heat."

The other card bore the one word "Sympathy."

Very soon the girl telephoned "Thank you so much for the flowers. But why did you write 'Sympathy' on the card?"—National Monthly.

Writing Popular Songs.

Only those who have tried it and failed know the disappointments of the song writer striving to induce a publisher to look at his work. For those who would try here is a tip from one who has made good: "If your song is to make a hit the air must be hard to remember, though catchy and pleasing. If it can be whistled by any one who hears it once or twice it will not sell, and the publisher will reject it."—New York Sun.

Wonderful.

Critic—The heroine of your story, old man, is simply wonderful. Author (delighted)—You think so? Critic—Yes. You say on page ten that she hissed "You are a liar!" and any woman who can hiss such a sentence as that can't help being wonderful.—Boston Transcript.

On the Rural Delivery

By OLIVE EDNA MAY

Edward Bartlett, on route No. 4, free rural delivery, was driving his rattle-trap buggy along the road looking over the letters to be put in the next mail box, when he encountered George Irwin walking.

"Anything for me, Ed?" asked Irwin. "If there is you'll get it in your box," replied the postman.

"I'm going out of town; on my way to the station now. It would be an accommodation if you would give it to me now if there's anything for me otherwise it'll have to be forwarded."

Bartlett pulled up. Irwin drew near him, and while the former looked over a handful of letters the latter leaned forward to see the addresses himself.

"There it is!" he exclaimed, making a grab for one of the letters, and his interference resulted in the spilling of some twenty of them on the ground while a dozen more fell within the buggy. Irwin apologized, and, picking up the letters scattered near his feet, he handed them to Bartlett.

"Did you take the letter addressed to you?" asked the latter.

"No, it wasn't for me. I thought it was, but I was mistaken."

"Now, see here, George Irwin, here after when I'm handling my mail you keep your hands off it. The next time you do a thing like that I'll have you arrested for interfering with a government officer in the discharge of his duties."

"Sorry, Ed. I didn't intend to interfere."

Bartlett drove on without making a reply. At Deacon Warder's box he found Susie Warder, the deacon's daughter, aged eighteen, waiting for him. There was an intensity in her face that indicated anxious expectation. Bartlett had often delivered letters to her addressed in a masculine hand, and by the way she hugged them to her heart and ran into the house with them he had surmised that they came from a lover. Instead of putting the mail in the box he handed it to her. She looked over it and her face fell.

"Nothing more?" she asked, looking up at the postman despairingly.

"That's all. Sorry I haven't one for you today, Miss Warder. Perhaps I'll bring you one tomorrow."

"No, you won't," replied the girl, tears starting to her eyes. "If it was to come at all it would have come today."

Bartlett sighed sympathetically. During the rest of his trip over his route his mind was more on Susie Warder than on the mail. Her words "If it was to come at all it would have come today" remained with him, and he couldn't banish them. What did they mean? That the expected letter was to have been from the lover he could not doubt.

Our minds now roll smoothly from one train of thought to another, and again they jump gaps. And yet there is doubtless a connection between the two sides of the gap too subtle for us to distinguish. Bartlett's mind turned from Susie's disappointment to George Irwin's grabbing at the letters. Then he made a mental jump, for there was no connection between his two thoughts. Susie's letter didn't come, and perhaps George Irwin when he picked up those that fell on the ground retained one for Susie.

Though he knew of no reason for such an act, he couldn't dismiss the suggestion. It occurred to him to turn back and charge Irwin with purloining a letter, trusting to have struck the correct theory. He looked at his watch. It was 4 o'clock. He had met George about 3:20. There was no train either way out of the station between 3:25 and 4:40. He remembered to have heard the whistle of the 3:25 train while he was talking with George. The man had doubtless made his statement about going out of town falsely and for a pretext to steal the letter.

When Bartlett reached these inconclusive conclusions he had finished his delivery. He drove rapidly back to the village, occasionally asking one he met if he had seen George Irwin. Presently he found a man who had seen him and gave the postman a clue to find him. Bartlett found his man on a road where no one else was about.

"Give me the letter you took!" he said resolutely and confidently.

"The letter I took? What do you mean?"

"I mean that when you picked up those that dropped on the ground you kept one."

Irwin stood at bay. Presently he said: "You have no right to accuse me. If you know I took a letter, surely you know to whom that letter was addressed."

"I do—Susan Warder."

Irwin turned white. Bartlett must have evidence against him that he did not know of.

"What'll you do if I give it up?" "I'll tell you what I'll do if you don't give it up," said Bartlett, jumping out of his buggy. "I'll break every bone in your body."

Irwin was cowed. Tremblingly he put his hand in his pocket, took out the letter and handed it to the postman. Bartlett jumped back into his buggy and whipped up the horse for Deacon Warder's. On giving Susie the letter she opened it, and her face lighted up with joy.

Bartlett told her all about the removal of the letter from the mail, and she told him that her lover and George Irwin were rivals.

He needed no further explanation.

NAPOLEON'S ARMY EAGLES.

They Were Patterned After the Ancient Symbol of the Caesars.

Eagles lasted only from 1805 to Waterloo. Before then it had been the custom in armies to carry huge unwieldy flags mounted on poles which, while they afforded a rallying point for their corps, also drew the enemy's fire. It remained for Napoleon to revive the ancient symbol of the Caesars.

At first an eagle was presented to every battalion of infantry and every squadron of horse. But owing to the number of eagles captured this allowance was cut down. All battalion eagles were withdrawn and one eagle was carried by each regiment of foot and cavalry. In 1812 a still further reduction was made and in some cases the regiments were ordered to leave their eagles in their arsenal. These standards were also taken from all regiments of light cavalry and one eagle sufficed occasionally for an infantry brigade.

The eagle itself was eight inches in height and nine inches across the wings. It stood on a brass block three inches square and weighed three and a half pounds.

Modern colors, cumbersome as they are, are as nothing compared to the old ones, which were as difficult to hide as the big drum. Thus there existed a regular system for saving eagles. Sometimes, when the tide of war ran adversely, they were unscrewed and put into haversacks or great coat pockets. At other times they were buried, thrown into ponds or rivers, broken up, hidden in hollow trees, and, most humiliating of all, stuffed into some dead horse to be hauled out subsequently.—Harper's Weekly.

COULDN'T SEE THE JOKE.

Charles Sumner's Woeful Lack of a Sense of Humor.

It was a rainy afternoon, and Mr. Longfellow was obliged to go out, leaving Sumner stretched on the sofa reading Lowell's volume. When he returned he asked Sumner how he liked the poems, and Sumner replied: "They are admirable, very good indeed. But why does he spell his words so badly?" Longfellow said that he attempted to explain that the poems were purposely written in the New England dialect, but Sumner could not understand.

One summer at Nahant I dined at Mr. Longfellow's with Mr. Sumner and some others. Sumner was a collector of china, about which he knew a great deal, as he did about many other things. He told us a story about going to see Lord Exmouth's collection and how fine it was. When he was taking his leave Lord Exmouth gave him two rare plates and offered to send them to his lodgings, but Sumner would not be parted from his prize and insisted on taking them home with him in his cab. When he had concluded his story, which was interesting, but long in narration, Tom Appleton, Mr. Longfellow's brother-in-law, who was present, said, "A pleasing tale, illustrated with two plates." Everybody laughed, and Sumner, looking about most good naturedly, said: "What are you all laughing at? I suppose Appleton is up to some mischief, but my story is quite true."—From "Some Early Memories," by Senator H. C. Lodge, in Scribner's Magazine.

Removing Paint Stains.

Paint is one of the most usual of the unsavory stains which afflict the skirt worn out of doors. "Fresh paint" stains are all very well if they are seen in time, but they have an inconvenient way of appearing boldly before the eyes after damage has been done. The easier a paint stain is removed the easier the task of removal will be. Spread a little dry laundry or corn-starch around the spot to keep the stain from spreading. Then wet the stain with turpentine. After a few minutes moisten again. Rub the paint up with a dull knife and a spoon handle and wet again with turpentine. When there is no trace of the paint rub the spot dry with clean cloth and brush off the starch. —Washington Star.

Traveling Sand Hills.

On the coast of Pomerania there are great tracts of sand heaped up by the wind, hundreds of yards in breadth and from 60 to 120 feet high, and these hills, propelled by the wind, move steadily in an easterly direction. The speed at which these great hills travel is from thirty-nine to fifty-six feet a year. Pine woods, which sometimes come in their line of march, can not stop them and are completely destroyed. The branches are rotted off by the sand, and nothing is left of the tree but the bare stems, which after a few years wither and die.

EXERCISES IN THE GREAT TENT

import of this fraternal gathering you are thrice welcome.
"Once again does this field tremble under the tread of a mighty host—not now in fear, however, but in joy. The field of enmity has become the field of amity.
"Within the short span of fifty years its gentle slopes and placid plains have witnessed three scenes of great historic import. First the battle, with its almost unexampled display of the physical powers of man; then the great heart and mind of Abraham Lincoln, bodied forth in his wonderful address delivered here, and last, this assemblage, the deep spiritual significance of which can scarcely be exaggerated.
"Looking backward with an unbiased eye, we can see the truth; we can see that in the very nature of things some such conflict was necessary to settle great questions for which there was no peaceful tribunal; we can see that the war of 1861 was fought by men upon each side for the right as each saw it. Before the war we were a loosely connected band of communities; we emerged from it a firmly welded together nation."

Commander Beers.
Alfred B. Beers of Bridgeport, Conn., commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, pointed out that the history of the world holds no record of "such a spectacle as this—the voluntary meeting on a battlefield of those who constituted the armed forces who fought against each other."
He sketched briefly the conflict "waged by men of the same race, of the same bravery, the same endurance" and expressed thanks that they were met now, as citizens of one nation "all imbued with the same spirit; all meeting our brothers" to assist in laying the cornerstone of a stronger and more enduring nation.

"The great bulk of veterans who served on either side," he continued, "cherished no personal animosity towards each other. Each did his duty as he saw it. Today the veterans of the North saluted veterans of the South with a feeling of joy in their hearts that the conflict is over and that they can meet each other as brothers. Then let those who wore the blue and those who wore the gray devote every effort to swell the chorus of peace and good will."

Worms in Horses.
The very best treatment for worms in horses is a good purge following a fast of a day or two. The best purge is given in the form of a ball, but if you find difficulty in administering such try a quart of raw linseed oil into which have been shaken two ounces of oil of turpentine in a drench, being careful not to strangle the animal, as this will set up a fatal pneumonia. Do this twice, a week apart. Follow this with Fowler's solution on feed, say a little bran twice a day for a short period. Give one-half ounce of standard Fowler's solution to each horse. If a mare is near foaling hesitate about giving the oil purge.—Dr. G. F. Babb.
Dairy Breeding and Feeding.
In all breeds milk records are broken so frequently that the last few years "the world's record cow" has held her title but a few months or not more than a year at most, says the Kansas Farmer. Superior breeding has been largely responsible for the big records, but the breeding could not have asserted except for a thorough understanding of feeding for milk and with this good care. Each is necessary to make dairy breeding count. We confidently predict that with a more general spread of the knowledge of feeding for milk production more high records will be established.
Scratches or cracked heels in horses may be largely prevented by keeping the stall floor clean and dry and may be cured by washing the affected parts, drying them and applying carbolic vaseline.

A Family of Ball Players.
Rivaling the famous Kentucky Gillingham family baseball team is the team that represents the thriving Maryland town of Barton. For here, too, all the players are brothers, and the aggregation is managed by the father of the nine. William J. Metz. For several years, ever since the youngest member, Charles R., was able to handle a bat and throw a ball across a diamond, the Metz boys have been playing together, and with such success that they have cleaned up nine from rival towns in their vicinity with unbroken success. Heury, the pitcher, has twirled with such ability that he has been approached by scouts for professional clubs; but, like the rest of the family, he plays ball because he enjoys the sport, and he has rejected all offers to figure in a swifter company.

Those who are growing affairs for the first time this year will be anxious to cut the crop at the right time. This is when about one-tenth of the blossoms are out, but before the new shoots from the crown of the plant get tall enough to be clipped with the mower. While cutting a little later than this increases the value of the first hay crop, it usually reduces the quantity and value of the second cutting.

What is said to be the highest price ever paid for a calf in the United States was received lately by a Holstein breeder of Middletown, N. Y., for a six-week-old Holstein bull calf. The purchase price was $3,000, and the little chap went to a Scranton (Pa.) breeder. His name is calculated to be in keeping with the long price paid for him, being King Pontiac Alcatraz Plotje. The sire of the calf is the $10,000 bull King Sagla Pontiac Alcatraz.
